What are the risks and what could I get in return?

Risk Indicator

The risk indicator assumes that you keep the product for 5 years. The actual risk can vary significantly if you cash in at an early stage and you may get back less.

The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of movements in the markets or because we are not able to pay you.

We have classified this product as 4 out of 7, which is a medium risk class.

This rates the potential losses from future performance at a medium level, and poor market conditions could impact the ability for you to receive a positive return on your investment.

Be aware of currency risk. In some circumstances, you may receive payments in a different currency from your local currency, so the final return you will get may depend on the exchange rate between the two currencies. This risk is not considered in the indicator shown above.

This product does not include any protection from future market performance so you could lose some or all of your investment.

The following risk may be material to the product but may not be adequately captured by the summarised risk indicator and may cause additional losses.

Technology risk: Trading venues/systems may be hacked, which may result in losses.

Regulatory risk: Market disruption and government intervention can make digital assets illegal.

For other risks materially relevant to the product which are not taken into account in the summary risk indicator, please read the product's Base Prospectus available at <https://etf.invesco.com>.

Investment performance information

The return to the investor depends on the return of the certificates. As the certificates are fully backed by physical gold, the performance of the certificates is driven by changes in the price of gold.

The benchmark of the certificate is the post-meridian (afternoon) auction rate for the London Bullion Market Association Gold price. The certificates are backed by physical gold which is purchased when the certificates are issued. The certificates are valued daily based on their gold entitlement and the post-meridian (afternoon) auction rate for the London Bullion Market Association Gold price which closely tracks the performance of the price of gold less costs. As a result, the performance and volatility of the certificates and the benchmark are very similar.

What could affect my return positively?

When the price of gold increases, the value of the certificates will also increase. The price of gold is influenced by a variety of factors including interest rate movements, exchange rate fluctuations, inflation and movements in other asset classes, with gold often being viewed as a store of value in periods of economic weakness. All of these factors will impact the supply (mining and recycled material) and demand (investor, consumer and industrial) for this precious metal commodity which will in turn impact the price.

What could affect my return negatively?

When the price of gold decreases, the value of the certificates will also decrease.

Should you sell your investment during adverse market conditions for gold, you are likely to make a loss or a very low return on your investment. On 31 December 2100, the final maturity date, any certificates that have not been previously sold or redeemed, will be redeemed on that day. The gold assets will be sold at the prevailing market price on that day, and this will determine the price the certificates are redeemed at.

What happens if Invesco Physical Markets PLC is unable to pay out?

You may face a financial loss should the Manufacturer or the custodian, JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., default on their obligations.

There is no compensation or guarantee scheme in place which may offset, all or any of, this loss.
